MOOD: 🌀 restless
MUSIC: Mudcrutch - Shady Grove

I need to make these for my Harpy.
(<https://www.livejournal.com/away?to=http%3A//notsohumblepie.blogspot.com/2009/12/science-cookies-gel-electrophoresis.html>)_. Got a particular favorite organism?

I mean, really the whole blog is so awesome. Especially the Cephalopod Cookie (<https://www.livejournal.com/away?to=http%3A//notsohumblepie.blogspot.com/2009/12/tuesday-cephalopod-cookie.html>)_.

This looks like a good idea.

PARAMECIUM! (I've been in love with its name since I was, like, four.) Also trilobites!

Hey, sorry about going all smothery-mothery on you yesterday. I recognize and honor your inherent grownupness. Also that you being unhappy doesn't mean I have to try to fix it.

Does that mean you won't bring me coffee and muffins and scarves anymore?

<3

Always. But I'll try to do it only when you actually need them. *g*

Well, in fairness, I was being Cynical Lad. Even more so than usual.

But really. "Critter getter"?

At least he had respectful things to say about his prey.

But argh. In the last hundred years or so, humans have been mostly unable to distinguish, behaviorally-speaking, between wolves and coyotes. I guess the wolves and coyotes decided they might as well be hanged for a sheep as for a lamb.

Um, metaphorically speaking.

Indeed.

And then, of course, if something comes along and destroys your habitat and then restocks it with other tasty things, what you gonna do?

Cubs gotta eat.

Vegas, as it expands into the mountains, keeps having mountain lion problems. Well, we build on their winter range, and then we leave little yappy dogs out in the yard overnight....

Paramecium!
Gonna get me some!
Paramecium!
Just because he's unicellular!
That don't mean he's dumb!

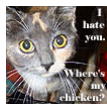

You're right. Good word.

Behavioral analysis
it's really quite preposterous
how much a guy can tell you from a scene.
And if you've a plecostomus
Or a train-ed platypus
we'll know in seconds how you got so mean!

Your signature we shall detect from the MO you select and we'll nail you demographic in a trice!
"This UNSUB's chief affect reflects a play by Bertolt Brecht,
and we believe he must wear glasses and eat rice!"
